Bid Made For Survival Of Program Despite Result
Of November Election

NEW YORK, April 10—Secretary of State Cordell Hull has delivered the strongest ultimatum yet given to the neutral nations of the world.

He said quite bluntly Sunday that the United States and the Allies have now passed from the position of weakness to that of strength and that the time of temporizing has ended. He said there was a long period during which, because of lack of strength, both the neutrals and the Allies were forced to temporize. Later in his talk he said there can be no compromise with Fascism or Nazism. The Axis ideology must and will go in total.

Neutrals Protected

Hull called attention to the scrupulous manner in which the Allied countries had respected the sovereignty of all alleged neutral nations. At no time during the last five years of terrific stress and strain has Great Britain or the United States ever violated the rights of, or intruded upon the sovereignty of any neutral nation—even when it was reasonably supposed that neutral was rendering aid and assistance to our enemies.

In regard to South American countries led by Argentina, the application of economic sanctions would be easy. The British empire alone is probably the largest single purchaser of Argentinian beef and other food products—that country's main output.

Ireland Dependent

Southern Ireland is totally dependent on the Allies for its supply of gasoline and oil as well as many other necessities. If Great Britain and the United States cut off the supply of those commodities, great inconvenience and even hardship would be suffered by Eire. The same condition, only on a much larger scale, applies to Spain.

There was time during which possibly Franco did not dare refuse Hitler's request for certain raw commodities, because if the Fuehrer had been defeated he would have sent German troops out of France via the Pyrenees mountains into Spain. At that time the Spanish army was in no condition to give battle to the Axis troops. But that day is past. Hitler has too many uses for all of his

New Marine Regiment
To Be Fiercest In All
Leatherneck History

ADVANCED SOLOMON ISLAND BASE, March 20—(Delayed)— The blood-stained heritage of the most honored Marine regiment in World War II—the undying heroes of the Fourth Marine regiment of Bataan—will be perpetuated by the fiercest fighting Leatherneck unit ever formed.

A new Fourth Marine regiment, comprising four of the most blooded battalions in corps history—the famed Marine Raiders whose battle flags have been raised in victory in all corners of the Pacific—has been organized to finish the fight launched by the fallen gallants of the Philippines.

The new 4th Marines, under the command of Lt. Col. Alan A. Shapley, Detroit, were organized in January, under the new Marine program to do away with specialized units. Their first operation was in the virtually unopposed occupation of Emirau island in the St. Matthias group, northwest of the Solomons.

These Men Remember

To these men has fallen the task of avenging America's dead in the Pacific. They have read of the atrocities perpetrated by the Japanese on our war prisoners in the Philippines.

And they will remember. And the Japanese in the months to come will feel their wrath; know their reprisals. They will taste the fire of a unit whose tradition and combat records date back to every ground action in the Pacific, with the exception of the New Guinea campaign.

Marines who fought at Olongapo, Mariveles, Bataan and Corregidor in the Philippines; at Midway, Guadalcanal, Makin island, the Russells; who made raids on Vangunu, Segi and the Dragon peninsula section of New Georgia in the Munda campaign; and in the landing and securing of Empress Augusta Bay on Bougainville in November—these are the men of the new 4th regiment.

The Marine raiders under Col. (now Brig. General) Merritt A. Edson first came into national prominence in this war when they landed on the island of Tulagi and opened the Solomons island offensive which is currently drawing to a close.

In Bitter Fighting

In some of the bitterest fighting of the war the Raiders wiped out the Jap garrison and then moved on to Guadalcanal to take a major part in the battle for the now famous Henderson field, the latter island's principal airstrip.

Other raiders under the command of Lt. Col. Evans F. Carlson made a daring raid on Makin island in the Marshalls in August 1942, and paid a return visit there to take it, in November, 1943. This same force was also in action on Guadalcanal.

The Raiders have operated almost exclusively in the South Pacific to date, the campaigns in the Russells, New Georgia, Bougainville and Matthias group keeping them fairly busy during the last year.

On the other hand, Sen. Warren Austin (R) Vt., an advocate of internationalism, declared the Republicans must take a firm stand for international cooperation "and attaining a peace that will prevail."

Wheeler disclosed a strong effort will be made to write a nationalistic plank in the Democratic platform. Regarding GOP chances, he said:

"If the Republicans have the intestinal stamina to stand on a platform for America as against internationalism and the Democrats go on record for some impractical internationalism, there is no question in my mind but that the Republicans will win."

"If the Republican candidate, whoever he may be, straddles this issue and just utters a lot of meaningless platitudes with a view to fooling both sides, their chances of election, in my opinion, will go down."

Wheeler declared that the people "demand that platforms be not weasle-worded" but "they want platforms that mean something" armed forces on his present battle-fields and those that are about to materialize, to pay any attention to Spain. However, should Hitler send troops into Spain, the Allies are now strong enough to dispatch their own soldiers into that country to stop the Nazi legions. It must be remembered that in the case of the South American Argentinian bloc, Southern Ireland and Spain, the Allied land, sea and air forces are sufficiently strong to enforce economic sanctions by naval blockade, or if necessary and our government so decrees to actually accomplish demands on those countries.

BUCKS FOREIGN POLICY

A bid for survival of the administration's foreign policy, regardless of the survival of Cordell Hull and President Roosevelt, was believed today to be one of the main objectives of Hull's Sunday address.

Some observers went so far as to say that Hull may have been anticipating the possibility of defeat of the Democratic party next November, and was inviting the entire country to embrace international collaboration as a non-partisan policy.

Hull said for his closing words a reference to the Republican repudiation of the foreign policy of Woodrow Wilson.

"Should this happen again," said Hull, "it will be a tragedy to you and to your children and to the world for generations."

Hull laid more cards on the table than in previous discussions of foreign policy. He dealt specifically with such controversial problems as the French national committee, Spanish aid to Germany, the Atlantic Charter and the Badoglio government in Italy.

RAPS DE GAULE

Hull said flatly that the French committee of National Liberation is "not the government of France and we cannot recognize it as such." He made it clear, as the President has also done, that Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower "must have unfettered authority" in France, as the territory is being liberated.

Though not naming Spain, the secretary obviously had that country in mind when he said the Allies must insist that neutrals should no longer "purchase protection against aggression." By sending Germany the essential ingredients of the steel which kills our soldiers." This was an obvious reference to Spanish wolfram, a steel alloy which Spain has been sending to Germany.

He gave a liberal interpretation of the Atlantic Charter, which was taken to mean that it need not prevent Russia's annexation of Polish or other territory. He said "it is not a code of law," but merely that "it points the direction in which solutions are to be sought."

The Badoglio government in Italy, Hull indicated, has merely temporary Allied support. He stated frankly that military events in Italy had been disappointing, and that as soon as enough of the country is liberated to permit popular elections, a "free and Democratic Italian government" will be selected.

TO DRAW JURY

An order was issued in Common Pleas court Saturday to draw names for grand and petit jurors for the May term of court. 40 names will be drawn from the jury panel to serve as petit jurors and 16 names will be selected for grand jurors. All persons whose names are drawn will be ordered to appear at the Court house for service on May first or when called for future orders.

Some 150 miles to the northwest, other Red troops hacked away at tired Nazi troops retreating in the half-encircled rail center of Iasi (Jassy) in Romania. More than 200 towns fell before the Russian troops, including the communications hub of Zahorna, seven and one-half miles to the northeast.

London and Czech dispatches agreed that the Soviet army now stands on Czechoslovakian soil, but the last Soviet official communiqué failed to mention any action in this particular area. The official statement previously claimed only that Soviet troops were at the borderline.

Europe Bombed

On the other side of the European continent, the air war continued without let up. American Fortresses and Liberators dived through a heavy fog on the English channel to follow up a heavy RAF night raid on scattered objectives in France, Belgium and the Reich itself. Targets included aircraft repair plants and the airfield in the Brussels area, aircraft factories at Bourges, France, and military installations in the Pas De Calais area. The attacks were the third in as many days by U. S. heavy bombers on Luftwaffe installations and airfields.

RAF night bombers hit rail targets at Villeneuve St. Georges in the Paris area and at Lille. Those attacks coincided with stabs by plywood Mosquitos at Mannheim and objectives in western Germany. The air ministry claimed, which admitted loss of 11 planes, added that an extensive mine-laying program was carried out.

Activity on the Italian front abated somewhat, with New Zealand infantrymen storming two Nazi strongpoints on the Fifth Army front as Allied artillery batteries poured devastation on key enemy installations.

Action at Cassino

The big guns fired continuously in the Cassino area, with the Germans retaliating by hurling a steady mortar barrage along the upper reaches of the Rapido and near San Angelo. The Allied gunners were credited with destruction of five out of a concentration of 21 enemy tanks and self-propelled guns northeast of Minturno. Enemy artillery fire and patrols were less active in the Anzio beachhead area, and on the Eighth Army front, Ortona was shelled lightly. FARM CHEMISTRY

GRAT is agricultural chemistry; and Dr. Ernest Berl, research professor of the Carnegie Institute of Technology, is its prophet. He foresees the future farmer developing into a chemical wizard who will grow not only food, but industrial power, producing from his own crops the gasoline needed to run his tractors, and coal to heat his home.

The possibilities suggested by Dr. Berl are almost incredible. From 100 long tons of Louisiana dry sugar cane, he says, modern processes will make 2,980 gallons of gasoline, 3,430 gallons of middle oil, 1,210 gallons of lubricating oil, and 8.45 tons of raw cane sugar.

The best thing about such agricultural production is that it can replace the crude natural petroleum, whose reserves in this country are expected, by some experts, to be used up in about 15 years at the present rate of consumption. Future power will be grown in the fields and, by chemical process, made available for industrial use.

The famous Merlin and all other magicians may now withdraw and resign their magic to hard-headed scientists who really know something about it. Soon the ordinary motorist may be running his car on fuel generated by a little production plant in one corner of his vegetable garden.

KNOW YOUR GENERALS

BASEBALL managers know the value, in a pinch, of putting in a new batter whose habits the opposing pitcher has not had a chance to learn.

Gen. Eisenhower's appointment to lead the invasion of Europe may be on the same principle. He is the only general, says L. S. B. Shapiro, an English commentator, whose military ways of thought are unfamiliar to the Germans. Gen. Montgomery, Air Chief Sir Arthur Tedder, and Lieut.-Gen. Omar Bradley, have fought the Germans so long that their mental processes have been carefully studied, and may to some extent be anticipated. For Gen. Eisenhower the only information the Nazis have comes from his short campaign in North Africa.

The Civil War brought out this point clearly. Northern and Southern generals alike had known each other at West Point and afterward. Thus, in 1864, when J. B. Hood relieved Joseph Johnston as Confederate commander in Tennessee, Sherman, knowing him of old, said, "The change means fight." It did, and from their knowledge of Hood the Northern generals were ready.

Of course the Nazis may soon come to more knowledge of Gen. Eisenhower than they wish.

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

BY DREW PEARSON

STALEMATE IN ITALY

WASHINGTON—One factor which has worried the President about the Italian stalemate is the Italian political situation. Also, it has not alleviated his irritation with both Churchill and Stalin for helping to continue the Badoglio regime.

Most people don't realize it, but Italian civilians are simply not aiding the Allies. This is in contrast to the earlier days of the Italian invasion, when civilians penetrated the German lines and were an extremely important factor in the Allied advance.

In fact, some experts believe that Naples might have held out a month longer than it did if Italian youths had not slipped over to the American lines at night to get ammunition and then returned to sabotage and harass the Nazis from the rear. They came literally begging for hand grenades to throw at the Nazis.

Today, this anti-Nazi hostility is over, and we are getting little help from Italian civilians. Furthermore, there is a growing restlessness against the Allies in Southern Italy.

This is partly due to the fact that we have kept in power the former trappings of Fascism—namely, King Victor Emmanuel and Marshal Badoglio. It is also due to the bungling methods of AMG (Allied Military Government) and, finally, it is due to the difficult task of importing enough food.

AMG, according to grapevine reports, got off to a bad start when it was placed under Lord Rennell of Rodd, a former J. P. Morgan partner, which firm was once Mussolini's banker and still has around $60,000,000 outstanding as interest on a loan.

The U. S. Army had trained a number of military governors at the University of Virginia, but the President once made the crack that the school was packed with Wall street brokers. (Selection of students for the governors' school has since changed).

At any rate, even Secretary Hull now says that conditions inside occupied Italy are no worse, as he puts it, than during the German occupation. This is a serious admission and a long way from making the Allies the saviors of democracy and the champions of the four freedoms. So perhaps it is no wonder that Italian support has so completely evaporated.

Note—A survey of other factors causing the stalemate in Italy will follow soon.

EDEN'S GARDEN

It didn't leak out, but Colonel John Leval, State department expert on Near East oil, was called secretly before Senator Mahoney's oil committee to testify regarding the proposed pipe-line through Arabia. Senators are still talking about some of the things he revealed during the five-hour off-the-record session.

Among other things, Leval warned that Russia was certain to fix her eyes on the Middle East and try to take over certain rich oil sections there. The Tigris and the Euphrates valleys, Col. Leval told the committee, not only are rich in fertility, with tremendous irrigation possibilities, but also have an oil empire of 50 billion barrels—the key to peace or war.

After reminding senators that this territory was certain to be the victim of a tug—

Congress will he have to rely on? Republican House surely. And a Senate so divided politically that it will be little inspiration or aid to a president.

If Mr. Roosevelt does run for that fourth term and is defeated, who will succeed him? It is possible the country may put an isolationist in the White House. Reports from Chicago prove that a strong isolationist sentiment still exists in the powerful middle west.

When the casualty lists from that long anticipated invasion come in to bereaved families, how can anyone NOT say that hundreds of thousands of voters may not ask, "Why are we sending our fine young men to be killed abroad? Let Europe finish the war." began.

Of course, Uncle Joe has considered these and a thousand other uncertainties. Likewise he has considered the future of Winston Churchill. Would Foreign Minister Anthony Eden or Labor Leader Bevin, his possible successors, be ready to co-operate with Russia in her war and post-war aims? Stalin wonders about this riddle.

The Soviet leader must have on his mind, also, as he drives Russia across the continent, the picture of Woodrow Wilson after the last war—a repudiated Woodrow Wilson, turned down and out by his own people. Is it likely, ask the shrewd thinkers, that Stalin trusts the popularity of Roosevelt or any president to survive this war and the bleak days of reconstruction? This is a country that likes to tear down its idols.

So, ask realistic thinkers, why should canny Uncle Joe show his hand in this international poker game until he knows who will be sitting in with him this time next year?

This is the maddest poker game ever played in the history of the world. The bets have been raised above human comprehension. Millions of lives and the lives of many nations are in the pot. And dictators and countries are wild.

Stalin may be bluffing a little. But he knows that he, personally, holds a better hand now, before the draw, than either the American president or the British prime minister. He knows that he will be the boss of his own country six months from now. This is his ace in the hole.

Both Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill may find they've missed out on that inside royal straight flush they were hoping to fill. But he, Uncle Joe, is set to lay down four aces. Or maybe five. For, as I said, this is a poker game. And dunces and dictators are wild.

No wonder Uncle Joe is playing his cards close to his chest.

DIET AND HEALTH

MILK AND HONEY INADEQUATE DIET

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D. WHEN THE angel of the Lord appeared to Moses out of the burning bush, He promised that He would deliver the Israelites out of the hand of the Egyptians and bring them to "a land flowing with milk and honey: unto the place of the Canaanites, and the Hittites and the Amorites."

This apparently sounded good to Moses and his tribe, but personally I can remember away back in Sunday School that I was very skeptical about milk and honey as a steady diet. At long last, the question has been submitted to modern scientific arbitration. For reasons that are not too crystal clear to me, the Division of Agricultural Bio-chemistry of the University of Minnesota has been investigating how a man would thrive on an exclusively milk and honey diet.

As I say, I do not know why this question came up as I have never heard of anyone since the Exodus proposing that men should live exclusively on milk and honey, but nutritionists have a poetic streak in them and it is worth while to examine the research, because it gives an insight into how modern nutritionists go about solving problems.

Milk Diet Inadequate

An exclusive milk diet for an adult is not adequate. One can get enough calories out of milk although it requires a good deal of bulk. In a Wisconsin experiment station several students lived on milk alone except for some orange juice and some added minerals for three months. They drank as much as they wanted, which was 3 1/2 to 4 1/2 quarts a day. They maintained their weight and in fact some of them gained and they all felt well and satisfied.

But milk besides the large amount required is inadequate in iron and in copper, manganese and iodine, all necessary for nutrition. The Vitamin C is inadequate in pasteurized milk: that is why orange juice is added to infant feeding. Another vitamin, nicotinic acid, is low, and it is low in Vitamin D. Vitamin B in milk is adequate if enough milk and honey is an entirely adequate diet.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

M. B.:—I have a dog with follicular mange and the veterinary surgeon tells me to rub medicine on the sore. I wonder if a human being can catch it.

Answer: One of the nice things about dogs is that they have different diseases from ours. Neither distemper or mange affects humans.

The other waved a negligent hand. "In that case, of course."

The door opened. A young man entered, bearing another armload of furs, and laid them on the table. They waited until he had gone. The

E. W. P.:—Is it true that one fruit contains more acid than another? Can you print a list of acid and non-acid foods and what effect they have on the body?

Answer: Most fruits contain considerable organic acids, citric acid being the most familiar. As eaten they are acid, but they turn to an alkaline reaction in the body due to oxidation and the formation of potassium bicarbonate. Tomatoes, oranges, pears, peaches, apricots and pineapple for this reason tend to diminish the acidity of the urine; cranberries, plums and prunes tend to increase it on account of the large amount of quinic acid they contain.

45 Eastern Stars At Easter Morn Breakfast

Men Prepare, Serve Meal To Women

Forty-five members and guests enjoyed the annual Easter Morning Breakfast of Evergreen chapter, No. 169, Order of the Eastern Star, in Adelphi Masonic temple. As is the usual custom, the men of the organization prepared and served the meal. Mrs. J. L. Chilcott is worthy matron of the chapter.

The hall was a riot of color with its Easter decorations and the masses of lovely Spring flowers. Easter eggs, rabbits, chickens and brightly tinted baskets completed the decorations of the attractive tables. Guest of honor at the affair was Althea Stevens of Lakewood, Most Worshipful Grand Master, F. & A. M., of the State of Ohio.

The program for the affair was arranged by G. H. Armstrong, the Rev. I. C. Wright presenting the scripture reading and prayer.

Mrs. Elizabeth Reber Dunkel of Walnut township sang "The Holy City." Miss Donna Dill, her piano accompanist, also played a beautiful solo.

George Rihl was chairman of the hospitality committee and was assisted by Wayne Cryder, George Bowers, David Pontius and Francis Bowsher.

Birthday Party

Joann Buzzard of Darbyville was honored at a birthday party on her twelfth anniversary. She received many beautiful gifts.

A delightful lunch was served by her mother, Mrs. Arthur Buzzard, who was hostess at the delightful affair. Mrs. Buzzard was assisted by Miss Vivian Ankrom.

Guests included Maxine and Phyllis Ankrom, Annette Thomas, Norma Powell, Ellen Bunn, Sue Riser, Rose Mary Bowles, Clara Jean and Mary Lou Buzzard, Glen Jahn, Bobby Eitel, Jack Young, Glen McShane, Wilbur Bowles, Donald Thacker, Kenneth Hobart and Joann Buzzard.

Monday Club

The order of procedure will be reversed tonight at the meeting of the Monday club in the club room, Memorial hall. Mrs. J. H. Chen of Columbus, a graduate student in the school of social administration, Ohio State University, guest speaker for the evening, will talk during the first period of the meeting and the regular business hour will be at the close of the eve-

Sunday Guests

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Woodward of Circleville entertained at dinner Sunday, their guests including Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Huffer of this city.

Dazzling White Model

THIS two-piece ensemble of brilliant white is made of a new American fabric called sharkskin. It is a first cousin of familiar sharkskin (in the rayon family, of course) but instead of the shiny, smooth finish, it has a shantung-like surface, or perhaps you'd think it like linen in looks. It creases less than sharkskin, but has the same solid tailoring quality as our old fabric friend.

The skirt is plain, but with sufficient swing for comfort; the shirt top is lumber-jacket style, and has self buttons attached with brown thread in effective contrast.

Novel Uses For Cleaning Preparations Get Chores Done Easier And Quicker

Hints for HOUSEKEEPERS

The same bottled cleaner you use on window panes is very fine for shining the face of the clock.

By Marion Clyde McCarroll

If you haven't yet begun your Spring house cleaning, it's a good idea to organize the job before starting in.

First, investigate the storage closet to see what cleaning materials are on hand. Basic requirements for a good job include bottles of furniture and floor wax, furniture polish, a good insecticide, wallpaper cleaner, a trustworthy preparation for bleaching and stain removal, window cleaning fluid, and, of course, broom, vacuum cleaner or carpet sweeper, brushes, soft cloths and mop.

Make a list of such items as are not already on hand, and get them all in a single shopping excursion. If you haven't a handied basket of convenient size around, get one, and put dusters, cleaning cloths, brushes, bottles and other small articles in it so that you can carry it with you when you're working and thus save steps.

A few special hints for housekeepers: Wax the inside of your garbage can; it will be easier to keep clean. Use your window cleaning fluid to shine the clock's face, clean mirrors and other household glass. Treat a small paint brush with furniture polish and use for hard-to-get-at corners and carving on furniture. Dip cheesecloth squares into a small quantity of furniture polish and allow to dry; they'll dust more effectively. And when you've finished your cleaning chores, put back the reusable caps of all bottles tightly to prevent evaporation.

TWINS PUZZLE REFEREE AND FIGHT TO DRAW

SOMEWHERE IN THE SOUTH PACIFIC—(Delayed)—Last night, in a palm-fringed coconut grove here I witnessed the goofiest boxing match I have ever seen.

This fight was a battle of brothers, which is not uncommon in service bouts. But these brothers were twins. Not only were their looks and fighting togs alike—even to white shoe laces—but they fought in exactly the same style.

To complicate matters further, twins were in their corners as seconds, so when the fighters switched corners at the end of round two—at least they say they switched—even their handlers found it impossible to tell them apart.

The fighters, both champions in the welterweight and middleweight classes in the South Pacific, were Harvey and Moe Weiss, Marine privates first class, of the Bronx, N. Y. Their seconds were Wilbur and William Baron, USA, or Baltimore, hoofers in a variety show currently touring Allied bases in this theater of war.

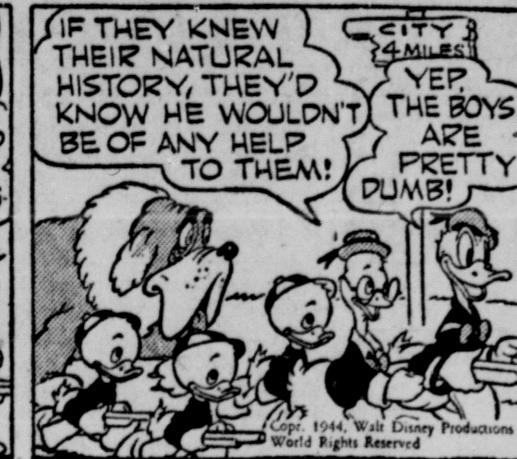

Tipped off that the fighters had switched corners, the judges finally came up with a decision to top all decisions.

The servicemen, in the audience, as baffled as the officials, cheered long and loud when the chaplain, acting as announcer, stammered:

"The winner—Weiss," and pointed to both corners at the same time.

The fighters, both champions in the welterweight and middleweight classes in the South Pacific, were Harvey and Moe Weiss, Marine priv

Circleville Knocks Down Two German Planes Over England

DON VALENTINE HELPS MAN GUN NAMED FOR CITY

Local Youth Honored By
Men From All Parts
Of United States

FIRST FIGHT DESCRIBED

Franklin Crites Honored
For Role In Helping
Supply China

Mark off two German planes for Circleville, for Circleville is the name of a 90 millimeter gun in England with Corporal Donald Valentine in the crew. In a recent raid it smashed two of the Huns. Serving in the gun crew are men from many parts of the United States, but when christening time came it was Corporal Valentine and his home town who were honored. The name is painted on the gun and a photograph is on the way here to the corporal's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Loring Valentine.

Describes Fight

In writing of his first fight in which the German planes were downed Corporal Valentine said:

"We got on our targets and fired and laid our claims to two enemy planes. I heard that we got one for sure, but for our side we know we got two. After one of our courses we could hear one plane screaming down. That was our probable. No doubt about the other one. When a fellow fires he does not pay much attention to anything except shoving in the shell and pulling the trigger. Maybe I am a killer. I hope so. If we are officially credited with those planes you share the honor with me because we did it for everyone back home."

"We all hope to engage the enemy again tonight."

When Corporal Valentine was in grade school he corresponded regularly with an English youth. Now, he is stationed only a short distance from the home of the Englishman and expects to visit his home town soon.

And on the other side of the world a Circleville man also is playing an important part in defeating the Axis, a part so important in fact that he is wearing a highly coveted decoration.

Wing Decorated

Franklin Crites writes:

"Today marked the end of our first year in China. We were decorated this afternoon at almost the exact hour we landed here a year ago."

It seems that the President thought that during the month of December we did a pretty good job of getting things into China, so he decided to give the wing his citation. I was one of 12 men selected to receive the decoration for our outfit, since it would have taken a long time for the old general to have pinned them on the whole outfit. The ceremony was rather simple, but impressive. The 12 of us and four officers stood in a line at parade rest and as the general came to each of us he shook our hands. All the wing personnel received the decoration and there are lots of them, but when we get back home and spread out over all the U. S. I don't suppose a person will run into many of those little blue ribbons with a gold frame around them. The only persons at home to have one, will be Ross Hamilton, Jackson township, Fred Gerhardt, Youngblood, Ralph Alderman, of Salt Creek township, a pilot, and myself.

"None of us did anything outstanding, but the teamwork and accomplishment of moving the supplies apparently spoke for themselves."

TITLES FOR AUTOMOBILES DROP LOW DURING 1943

Automobile titles issued in 1943 were 707 fewer than in 1942, according to report issued in the Clerk of Courts office, Saturday.

Rationing of new cars and few used cars being sold accounts for the decrease.

In March of this year 428 titles were issued against 192 for the month of February with 153 cancellations of mortgages in March and 83 in February. 127 new mortgages were noted in March and 71 in February.

NEW FACES FOR OLD:

By BIRT DARLING
Central Press Correspondent

DETROIT, Mich. — Not many blocks from the pulsating war production lines of Detroit's major plants is a small, secluded studio.

The booming war plants are turning out instruments which kill and maim; the tiny studio is turning out a product which will enable maimed soldiers to face the post-war world unafraid.

For Beaver Edwards has devised a full-face mask which, literally, is giving disfigured veterans of this war a chance to trade old faces for new.

While most of Edwards' work has centered around hands, arms, noses and ears, this new development—the full face mask—is now giving him an exciting new objective.

It is the rehabilitation of servicemen who, heretofore, would remain in hospitals, hating their scars, fearing the public and undergoing a psychological hell.

"We've been keeping hundreds of these boys in hospitals where the public can't see them," Edwards points out. "Mentally and physically they are all right, but their appearance keeps them indoors.

"With this mask they will be able to go out for walks at night, attend movies and eat in a dimly-lighted restaurant. They will be able, in short, to live a reasonably normal life."

This full face mask is an amazing device, and the latest of a long line of contributions to humanity on the part of Edwards, whose work is known to the medical profession as "restorative prosthetics."

The wearer of such a mask can eat, drink and smoke while wearing it, without discomfort, secure in the knowledge that it can be identified as a mask only under strong lights.

Inspired in France

Edwards, who is scholarly-appearing, but who strikes you as a business man rather than a visionary, got his idea while on a tour through France where he saw the "mutilés"—French poliols of World War I, veils concealing their facial scars.

"They were all greatly depressed," recalls Edwards. "I thought: Why can't something be done to help make their lives happier and more useful?" I looked around, seeing them by the hundreds, arms, hands, noses and ears missing."

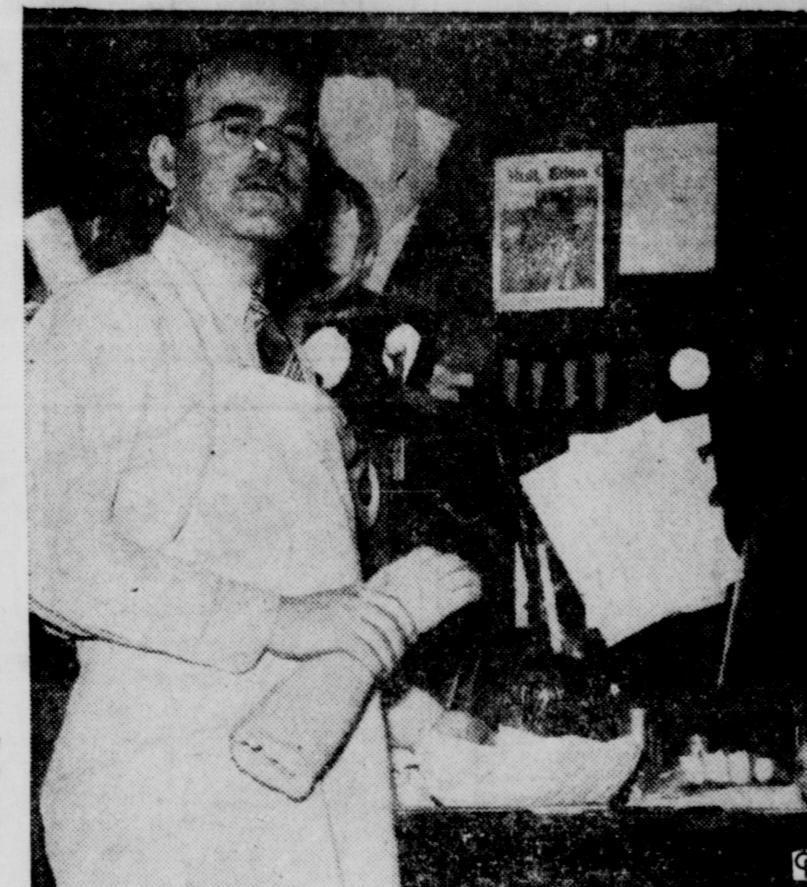

Edwards' chance to do something for this forgotten segment of humanity was not to come for awhile. He took up architectural work, later becoming an instructor at the Michigan College of Mortuary Science. It was while teaching here that he arrived at his plan for reconstructing shattered bodies.

His chance came when a physician referred a girl with a congenital ear defect to him. It was apparent that she needed a complete ear to give her the appearance of normalcy. Edwards went to work with plastic.

The plastic artist was doomed to disappointment. He made a dozen ears. Shaving closely, he stuck them on the sides of his face. If they didn't stay on during eight normal hours of tossing and turning at night, he gave them up.

"My wife was on the verge of nervous breakdowns quite frequently—or so she said—many times during the course of those early experiments," Edwards recalls with a shy grin.

But Edwards won out to become a ton-toncher in the field of prostheatics. Never satisfied with purely satisfactory functional artificial limbs, he tackled the "appeal" angle, and, in doing so, straightened out the thinking of hundreds of persons who had suffered the mental anguish of disfigurement.

"There are hundreds of types of artificial limbs," he will tell you. "Most of them perform the functional task for which they were designed, but leave their mark on the mind of the user."

"My interest is in the cosmetic appeal of making these replacement limbs look as real as possible with plastic.

Michigan Plastic Expert Now Creates New Features, Limbs for War-Maimed

because of the tremendous psychological effect it has on the patient."

The Detroit man knows he has many a problem to lick yet, with the invasion of new areas and resultant wounding of thousands of American troops—many of them by jagged shrapnel.

Loss of a member need not be tragic, Edwards firmly believes. He points out that the morale of servicemen who have lost a leg or arm or hand is usually high—until they see the device that is to replace the missing member.

The black rubber replacements which must be covered with a glove, give the wounded men psychological shocks and send their morale down to zero.

This is just what Edwards is fighting, and the plastic he now uses in his full face mask is his major weapon.

The replacement process itself is not difficult. Edwards simply makes a cast of the corresponding part of the patient's other member—say, an arm—working from there entirely from the cast, which is used to make a mold into which the plastic is poured.

Edwards allows it to harden, then, subtly, applies a solution of cosmetics, coloring the arm to the desired shade. Hair—yes, hair—is applied to match that of the patient. Upon completion the member is as soft and pliable as the living flesh of the opposite member!

There's one final step. Edwards fastens the member to the patient with a non-allergic adhesive—another development of his, incidentally. There won't be any rash where the artificial limb comes in contact with the patient's flesh, and the limb may be removed at night.

• Hull Issues Ultimatum To Neutral Nations

HELP TO NAZIS
MUST END NOW,
WORLD IS TOLD

Time For Temporizing At Close As Allies Pass To Position Of Strength

BACKS FOREIGN POLICY

Bid Made For Survival Of
Program Despite Result
Of November Election

NEW YORK, April 10—Secretary of State Cordell Hull has delivered the strongest ultimatum yet given to the neutral nations of the world.

He said quite bluntly Sunday that the United States and the Allies have now passed from the position of weakness to that of strength and that the time of temporizing has ended. He said there was a long period during which, because of lack of strength, both the neutrals and the Allies were forced to temporize. Later in his talk he said there can be no compromise with Fascism or Nazism. The Axis ideology must and will go in total.

Neutrals Protected

Hull called attention to the scrupulous manner in which the Allied countries had respected the sovereignty of all alleged neutral nations. At no time during the last five years of terrific stress and strain has Great Britain or the United States ever violated the rights of, or intruded upon the sovereignty of any neutral nation—even when it was reasonably supposed that neutral was rendering aid and assistance to our enemies.

In regard to South American countries led by Argentina, the application of economic sanctions would be easy. The British empire alone is probably the largest single purchaser of Argentinian beef and other food products—that country's main output.

Ireland Dependent

Southern Ireland is totally dependent on the Allies for its supply of gasoline and oil as well as many other necessities. If Great Britain and the United States cut off the supply of those commodities, great inconvenience and even hardship would be suffered by Eire. The same condition, only on a much larger scale, applies to Spain.

There was a time during which possibly Franco did not dare refuse Hitler's request for certain raw commodities, because if the Fuehrer had been defied he would have sent German troops out of France via the Pyrenees mountains into Spain. At that time the Spanish army was in no condition to give battle to the Axis troops. But that day is past. Hitler has too many uses for all of his

To Be Fiercest In All
Leatherneck History

ADVANCED SOLOMON ISLAND BASE, March 20—(Delayed)—The blood-stained heritage of the most honored Marine regiment in World War II—the undying heroes of the Fourth Marine regiment of Bataan—will be perpetuated by the fiercest fighting Leatherneck unit ever formed.

A new Fourth Marine regiment, comprising four of the most blooded battalions in corps history—the famed Marine Raiders whose battle flags have been raised in victory in all corners of the Pacific—has been organized to finish the fight launched by the fallen gallants of the Philippines.

The new 4th Marines, under the command of Lt. Col. Alan A. Shapley, Detroit, were organized in January, under the new Marine program to do away with specialized units. Their first operation was in the virtually unopposed occupation of Emirau island in the St. Matthias group, northwest of the Solomons.

These Men Remember
To these men has fallen the task of avenging America's dead in the Pacific. They have read of the atrocities perpetrated by the Japanese on our war prisoners in the Philippines.

And they will remember.

And the Japanese in the months to come will feel their wrath, know their reply. They will taste the fire of a unit whose tradition and combat records date back to every ground action in the Pacific, with the exception of the New Guinea campaign.

Marines who fought at Olongapo, Mariveles, Bataan and Corregidor in the Philippines; at Midway, Guadalcanal, Makin island, the Russells; who made raids on Yamamoto, Seigai and the Dragon peninsula section of New Georgia in the Munda campaign; and in the landing and securing of Empress Augusta Bay on Bougainville in November—these are the men of the new 4th regiment.

First World War

WASHINGTON, April 10—Secretary of Agriculture Claude A. Wickard indorsed today creation of a congressional postwar agriculture policy committee—similar to the Wadsworth postwar military group—which would cushion the blow of "unemployment, depression and misery" after the war.

Wickard, alarmed over present trends which he fears will lead the nation's farmers into the same economic ruts experienced after World War I, disclosed in an exclusive interview he "would like to see" congress set up a bi-partisan committee on agriculture policy.

He maintained the committee, if it were to operate effectively, must be divorced of politics and function solely in the interests of the farmer and agriculture as a whole.

Opposition Likely

Although no such committee has been suggested on Capitol Hill, Wickard labeled it as "something worth thinking about," but an idea which might lead to opposition from the political standpoint.

Asked if membership in a possible congressional postwar agriculture policy committee should include bi-partisan congressmen, representatives of the agriculture de-

FLYER'S EASTER
CARD FOLLOWED
BY DEATH NOTE

NEW YORK, April 10—Easter Sunday was a sad day for Mrs. Michael F. Murphy, of Jamaica.

At 11 a. m., she answered the doorbell and received a bouquet of flowers from her son, First Lieutenant William M. Murphy, an overseas veteran who had been serving as an instructor at Santa Rosa, Calif. A card said "Easter greetings to mom from Bill."

A few minutes later, while she was arranging the flowers in a vase, the doorbell rang again. This time it was a telegram from the war department announcing that her son had been killed Saturday evening when his fighter plane crashed at Napa, Calif.

Lieutenant Murphy, holder of the Air Medal with four Oak Leaf Clusters and the Distinguished Flying Cross, was a veteran of 50 combat missions over North Africa, Sicily and Italy and was credited with downing three enemy planes. He returned to this country in October of last year.

In one of the worst storms to hit the Colorado Rockies in years, four cars were buried in the slide, and hundreds of persons were reported marooned in snow that reached a depth of eight feet in some places.

Harold Brumbaugh, sheriff of Clear Creek county, reported that rescue workers were working to reach at least two other cars buried in the slide.

The workers reached one car that was swept off the road, and one woman occupant of the car was reported injured.

Two buses loaded with holiday travelers were stuck near the small mining town of Georgetown in the storm that began shortly before dawn Sunday.

Thirty persons fought their way through eight feet of snow to the lodge at the top of the pass, and although marooned by the snow and eight above zero weather, were reported to be safe.

GOP VICTORY
SIGNS HOISTED

Solons Tell How To Defeat
F. D. R., But Roads Lead
In Opposite Ways

WASHINGTON, April 10—Sen. Burton K. Wheeler (D) Mont., declared today that the Republican party will have a good chance of winning the presidential election if it takes a stand for America against internationalism.

On the other hand, Sen. Warren Austin (R) Vt., an advocate of internationalism, declared the Republicans must take a firm stand for international cooperation "and attaining a peace that will prevail."

Wheeler disclosed a strong effort will be made to write a nationalistic plank in the Democratic platform. Regarding GOP chances, he said:

"If the Republicans have the intestinal stamina to stand on a platform for America as against internationalism and the Democrats go on record for some impractical internationalism, there is no question in my mind but that the Republicans will win."

If the Republican candidate, who ever he may be, straddles this issue and just utters a lot of meaningless platitudes with a view to fooling both sides, their chances of election, in my opinion, will go glimmering."

Wheeler declared that the people "demand that platforms be not weasel-worded" but "they want platforms that mean something

HELP TO NAZIS MUST END NOW, WORLD IS TOLD

Time For Temporizing At Close As Allies Pass To Position Of Strength

(Continued from Page One) armed forces on his present battle-fields and those that are about to materialize, to pay any attention to Spain. However, should Hitler send troops into Spain, the Allies are now strong enough to dispatch their own soldiers into that country to stop the Nazi legions.

It must be remembered that in the case of the South American Argentinian bloc, Southern Ireland and Spain, the Allied land, sea and air forces are sufficiently strong to enforce economic sanctions by naval blockade, or if necessary and our government so decrees to actually accomplish landings on those countries.

Backs Foreign Policy

A bid for survival of the administration's foreign policy, regardless of the survival of Cordell Hull and President Roosevelt, was believed today to be one of the main objectives of Hull's Sunday address.

Some observers went so far as to say that Hull may have been anticipating the possibility of defeat of the Democratic party next November, and was inviting the entire country to embrace international collaboration as a non-partisan policy.

Hull saved for his closing words a reference to the Republican repudiation of the foreign policy of Woodrow Wilson.

"Should this happen again," said Hull, "it will be a tragedy to you and to your children and to the world for generations."

Hull laid more cards on the table than in previous discussions of foreign policy. He dealt specifically with such controversial problems as the French national committee, Spanish aid to Germany, the Atlantic Charter and the Badoglio government in Italy.

Raps De Gaulle

Hull said flatly that the French committee of National Liberation is "not the government of France and we cannot recognize it as such." He made it clear, as the President has also done, that Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower "must have unfettered authority" in France, as the territory is being liberated.

Though not naming Spain, the secretary obviously had that country in mind when he said the Allies must insist that neutrals should no longer "purchase protection against aggression." By sending Germany the essential ingredients of the steel which kills our soldiers." This was an obvious reference to Spanish wolfram, a steel alloy which Spain has been sending to Germany.

He gave a liberal interpretation of the Atlantic Charter, which was taken to mean that it need not prevent Russia's annexation of Poland or other territory. He said "it is not a code of law," but merely that "it points the direction in which solutions are to be sought."

The Badoglio government in Italy, Hull indicated, has merely temporary Allied support. He stated frankly that military events in Italy had been disappointing, and that as soon as enough of the country is liberated to permit popular elections, a "free and Democratic Italian government" will be selected.

TO DRAW JURY

An order was issued in Common Pleas court Saturday to draw names for grand and petit jurors for the May term of court. 40 names will be drawn from the jury panel to serve as petit jurors and 16 names will be selected for grand jurors. All persons whose names are drawn will be ordered to appear at the Court house for service on May first or when called for future orders.

BERLIN ADMITS EVACUATION OF VITAL SEAPORT

Fate Of Great Defending Army Not Revealed In Nazi News Report

Some 150 miles to the northwest, other Red troops hacked away at tired Nazi troops retreating to the half-encircled rail center of Iasi (Jassy) in Romania. More than 200 towns fell before the Russian troops, including the communications hub of Zahorna, seven and one-half miles to the northeast.

Europe Bombed

On the other side of the European continent, the air war continued without let up. American Fortresses and Liberators dived through a heavy fog on the English channel to follow up a heavy RAF night raid on scattered objectives in France, Belgium and the Reich itself. Targets included aircraft repair plants and the airfield in the Brussels area, aircraft factories at Bourges, France, and military installations in the Pas de Calais area. The attacks were the third in as many days by RAF night bombers hit rail targets at Villeneuve St. Georges in the Paris area and at Lille.

Those attacks coincided with stabs by plywood Mosquitos at Mannheim and objectives in western Germany. Dewey knew he faces a series of enormous tasks. He is prepared mentally to assume those tasks and will go to the White House prepared to carry them out to the best of his human ability even if he should be repudiated by the American electorate at the end of his first term.

Those close to Governor Dewey say he foresees many major problems confronting the president of the United States after next January 20—when the new term begins. He views the most important of these problems as:

1. Winning the war.

2. Winning the peace, by which is meant the drafting of a peace treaty that will be approved by the vast majority of the American people—which is another way of saying a peace treaty that will be ratified overwhelmingly by the senate of the United States in the constitutional manner.

3. Saving our system of government or preserving the American way of life, by which is meant rescuing the great American institutions of private initiative and free enterprise from government regimentation and socialization.

Governor Dewey also would like to see the American judiciary restored to a higher plane. He believes President Roosevelt has lowered the calibre of the federal judiciary by political appointment.

He would like to see men, who rise to eminence at the bar—famous civil and criminal trial lawyers—named to the federal bench.

Wickard explained that while industry and labor are taking steps to reconvert their resources and efforts back to peacetime production, agriculture has no clear-cut program. He held that lack of action in the months to come may result in disaster similar to that already experienced by farmers 20 some years ago.

He said he has already conferred with the leading farm organizations on the postwar agricultural problems and also has recommended to state land grant colleges immediate local action throughout the country to bring the postwar picture into sharp focus.

Must Arouse Farmers

"The task of arousing the farm people in their discussions and thinking on the postwar problems and peace must fall largely on the land grant colleges," Wickard declared.

"However, I would like to see Congress set up a postwar agriculture committee and formulate a policy plan to combat the dangers of an economic letdown."

One of the toughest problems facing the nation in the postwar era, Wickard commented, is the land boom which is shaping up for a repeat performance.

"If we aren't careful, I think some of the postwar problems will be even more troublesome this time than they were after the first war," the secretary said.

He held that although the United States "has made a lot of progress" since then, it had failed to solve many of the agricultural problems before they were obscured by World War II.

"I am disappointed in the nation's farmers aren't more aware of the problems with which they will be faced when the war is over," he continued. "There seems to be a general feeling that we can take care of these difficulties when we are further along in the war—that we will be better able to deal with them later on."

"This is not the case. We are now at a point we should be planning—setting up a workable plan to meet emergencies when they do happen on the agricultural front."

Wickard explained that while industry and labor are taking steps to reconvert their resources and efforts back to peacetime production, agriculture has no clear-cut program. FARM CHEMISTRY

GRAT is agricultural chemistry; and Dr. Ernest Berl, research professor of the Carnegie Institute of Technology, is its prophet. He foresees the future farmer developing into a chemical wizard who will grow not only food, but industrial power, producing from his own crops the gasoline needed to run his tractors, and coal to heat his home.

The possibilities suggested by Dr. Berl are almost incredible. From 100 long tons of Louisiana dry sugar cane, he says, modern processes will make 2,980 gallons of gasoline, 3,430 gallons of middle oil, 1,210 gallons of lubricating oil, and 8.45 tons of raw cane sugar.

The best thing about such agricultural production is that it can replace the crude natural petroleum, whose reserves in this country are expected, by some experts, to be used up in about 15 years at the present rate of consumption. Future power will be grown in the fields and, by chemical process, made available for industrial use.

The famous Merlin and all other magicians may now withdraw and resign their magic to hard-headed scientists who really know something about it. Soon the ordinary motorist may be running his car on fuel generated by a little production plant in one corner of his vegetable garden.

KNOW YOUR GENERALS

BASEBALL managers know the value, in a pinch, of putting in a new batter whose habits the opposing pitcher has not had a chance to learn.

Gen. Eisenhower's appointment to lead the invasion of Europe may be on the same principle. He is the only general, says L. S. B. Shapiro, an English commentator, whose military ways of thought are unfamiliar to the Germans, Gen. Montgomery, Air Chief Sir Arthur Tedder, and Lieut.-Gen. Omar Bradley, have fought the Germans so long that their mental processes have been carefully studied, and may to some extent be anticipated. For Gen. Eisenhower the only information the Nazis have comes from his short campaign in North Africa.

The Civil War brought out this point clearly. Northern and Southern generals alike had known each other at West Point and afterward. Thus, in 1864, when J. B. Hood relieved Joseph Johnston as Confederate commander in Tennessee, Sherman, knowing him of old, said, "The change means fight." It did, and from their knowledge of Hood the Northern generals were ready.

Of course the Nazis may soon come to more knowledge of Gen. Eisenhower than they wish.

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

BY DREW PEARSON

STALEMATE IN ITALY

WASHINGTON—One factor which has worried the President about the Italian stalemate is the Italian political situation. Also, it has not alleviated his irritation with both Churchill and Stalin for helping to continue the Badoglio regime.

Most people don't realize it, but Italian civilians are simply not aiding the Allies. This is in contrast to the earlier days of the Italian invasion, when civilians penetrated the German lines and were an extremely important factor in the Allied advance.

In fact, some experts believe that Naples might have held out a month longer than it did if Italian youths had not slipped over to the American lines at night to get ammunition and then returned to sabotage and harass the Nazis from the rear. They came literally begging for hand grenades to throw at the Nazis.

Today, this anti-Nazi hostility is over, and we are getting little help from Italian civilians. Furthermore, there is a growing restlessness against the Allies in Southern Italy.

This is partly due to the fact that we have kept in power the former trappings of Fascism—namely, King Victor Emmanuel and Marshal Badoglio. It is also due to the bungling methods of AMG (Allied Military Government) and, finally, it is due to the difficult task of importing enough food.

AMG, according to grapevine reports, got off to a bad start when it was placed under Lord Rennell of Rodd, a former J. P. Morgan partner, which firm was once Mussolini's banker and still has around $60,000,000 outstanding as interest on a loan.

The U. S. Army had trained a number of military governors at the University of Virginia, but the President once made the crack that the school was packed with Wall street brokers. (Selection of students for the governors' school has since changed).

At any rate, even Secretary Hull now says that conditions inside occupied Italy are no worse, as he puts it, than during the German occupation. This is a serious admission and a long way from making the Allies the saviors of democracy and the champions of the four freedoms. So perhaps it is no wonder that Italian support has so completely evaporated.

Note—A survey of other factors causing the stalemate in Italy will follow soon.

EDEN'S GARDEN

It didn't leak out, but Colonel John Leval, State department expert on Near East oil, was called secretly before Senator Mahoney's oil committee to testify regarding the proposed pipe-line through Arabia. Senators are still talking about some of the things he revealed during the five-hour off-the-record session.

Among other things, Leval warned that Russia was certain to fix her eyes on the Middle East and try to take over certain rich oil sections there. The Tigris and the Euphrates valleys, Col. Leval told the committee, not only are rich in fertility, with tremendous irrigation possibilities, but also have an oil empire of 50 billion barrels—the key to peace or war.

After reminding senators that this territory was certain to be the victim of a tug—

Congress will he have to rely on? Republican House surely. And a Senate so divided politically that it will be little inspiration or aid to a president.

If Mr. Roosevelt does run for that fourth term and is defeated, who will succeed him? It is possible the country may put an isolationist in the White House. Reports from Chicago prove that a strong isolationist sentiment still exists in the powerful middle west.

When the casualty lists from that long anticipated invasion come in to bereaved families, how can anyone NOT say that hundreds of thousands of voters may not ask, "Why are we sending our fine young men to be killed abroad? Let Europe finish the war it began."

Of course, Uncle Joe has considered these and a thousand other uncertainties. Likewise he has considered the future of Winston Churchill. Would Foreign Minister Anthony Eden or Labor Leader Bevin, his possible successors, be ready to co-operate with Russia in her war and post-war aims? Stalin wonders about this riddle.

The Soviet leader must have on his mind, also, as he drives Russia across the continent, the picture of Woodrow Wilson after the last war—a repudiated Woodrow Wilson, turned down and out by his own people. Is it likely, ask the shrewd thinkers, that Stalin trusts the popularity of Roosevelt or any president to survive this war and the bleak days of reconstruction? This is a country that likes to tear down its idols.

So, ask realistic thinkers, why should canny Uncle Joe show his hand in this international poker game until he knows who will be sitting in with him this time next year?

This is the maddest poker game ever played in the history of the world. The bets have been raised above human comprehension. Millions of lives and the lives of many nations are in the pot. And dictators and dunces are wild.

Stalin may be bluffing a little. But he knows that he, personally, holds a better hand now, before the draw, than either the American president or the British prime minister. He knows that he will be the boss of his own country six months from now. This is his ace in the hole.

Both Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill may find they've missed out on that inside royal straight flush they were hoping to fill. But he, Uncle Joe, is set to lay down four aces. Or maybe five. For, as I said, this is a poker game. And dunces and dictators are wild.

Uncle Joe may well be mysterious, in the opinion of a sizable number of Washington prophets. His whole country may well be mysterious.

Wouldn't the United States be mysterious in her dealings with Russia if she knew that Stalin might be down and out by January, 1945?

The next presidential election day in the United States may bring a complete upset in the government of this country and the conduct of the war. To the rest of the world, the domestic and foreign policy of the United States and the sentiment of its people are therefore not to be counted on. As a major uncertainty, nobody really knows whether or not Mr. Roosevelt will run again. Perhaps Mr. Roosevelt doesn't know himself.

If he does run, will he be elected? If he is elected, what kind of

MILK AND HONEY INADEQUATE DIET

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

WHEN THE angel of the Lord appeared to Moses out of the burning bush, He promised that He would deliver the Israelites out of the hand of the Egyptians and bring them to "a land flowing with milk and honey: unto the place of the Canaanites, and the Hittites and the Amorites."

This apparently sounded good to Moses and his tribe, but personally I can remember away back in Sunday School that I was very skeptical about milk and honey as a steady diet. At long last, the question has been submitted to modern scientific arbitration. For reasons that are not too crystal clear to me, the Division of Agricultural Bio-chemistry of the University of Minnesota has been investigating how a man would thrive on an exclusively milk and honey diet.

Tests were made very often of the blood of these subjects, and a thorough physical examination including a dental examination.

The blood examinations determined whether the minerals necessary to life—calcium, phosphorus, magnesium, etc.—were present in proper proportions. Also whether the vitamins—B, C and others—were present in the blood in the proper proportions. This is done in all carefully conducted researches, and should come as a surprise to those who just guess they need some vitamins or iron and call at the drug store for a package: such action is not a controlled nutritional study.

During the test period three of the subjects lost weight and two gained. The vitamins stayed pretty low in the blood, but no serious symptoms of deficiency occurred.

In general it may be said that

Moses had his hopes raised too high by the idea that milk and honey is an entirely adequate diet.

QUESTION AND ANSWERS

M. B.—I have a dog with follicular mange and the veterinary tells me to rub medicine on the sores. I wonder if a human being can catch it.

Answer: One of the nice things about dogs is that they have different diseases from ours. Neither distemper or mange affects humans.

E. W. P.—Is it true that one fruit contains more acid than another? Can you print a list of acid and non-acid foods and what effect they have on the body?

Answer: Most fruits contain considerable organic acids, citric acid being the most familiar. As eaten they are acid, but they turn to an alkaline reaction in the body

due to oxidation and the formation of potassium bicarbonate. Tomatoes, oranges, pears, peaches, apricots and pineapple for this reason tend to diminish the acidity of the urine; cranberries, plums and prunes tend to increase it on account of the large amount of quinic acid they contain.

45 Eastern Stars At Easter Morn Breakfast

Men Prepare, Serve Meal To Women

Forty-five members and guests enjoyed the annual Easter Morning Breakfast of Evergreen chapter, No. 169, Order of the Eastern Star, in Adelphi Masonic temple. As is the usual custom, the men of the organization prepared and served the meal. Mrs. J. L. Chilcote is worthy matron of the chapter.

The hall was a riot of color with its Easter decorations and the masses of lovely Spring flowers. Easter eggs, rabbits, chickens and brightly tinted baskets completed the decorations of the attractive tables. Guest of honor at the affair was Althea Stevens of Lakewood. Most Worshipful Grand Master, F. & A. M., of the State of Ohio.

The program for the affair was arranged by G. H. Armstrong, the Rev. I. C. Wright presenting the scripture reading and prayer.

Mrs. Elizabeth Reber Dunkel of Walnut township sang "The Holy City." Miss Donna Dill, her piano accompanist, also played a beautiful solo.

George Rihl was chairman of the hospitality committee and was assisted by Wayne Cryder, George Bowers, David Pontius and Francis Bowsher.

Birthday Party

Joann Buzzard of Darbyville was honored at a birthday party on her twelfth anniversary. She received many beautiful gifts.

A delightful lunch was served by her mother, Mrs. Arthur Buzzard, who was hostess at the delightful affair. Mrs. Buzzard was assisted by Miss Vivian Ankrom. Guests included Maxine and Phyllis Ankrom, Annette Thomas, Norma Powell, Ellen Bunn, Sue Riser, Rose Mary Bowles, Clara Jean and Mary Lou Buzzard, Glen Jahn, Bobby Eitel, Jack Young, Glen McElroy, Wilbur Bowles, Donald Thacker, Kenneth Hobart and Joann Buzzard.

Monday Club

The order of procedure will be reversed tonight at the meeting of the Monday club in the club room, Memorial hall. Mrs. J. H. Chen of Columbus, a graduate student in the school of social administration, Ohio State university, guest speaker for the evening, will talk during the first period of the meeting and the regular business hour will be at the close of the eve-

Dazzling White Model

THIS two-piece ensemble of brilliant white is made of a new American fabric called sharkskin. It is a first cousin of familiar sharkskin (in the rayon family, of course) but instead of the shiny, smooth finish, it has a shantung-like surface, or perhaps you'd think it like linen in looks. It creases less than sharkskin, but has the same solid tailoring quality as our old fabric friend.

The skirt is plain, but with sufficient swing for comfort; the shirt top is lumber-jacket style, and has self buttons attached with brown thread in effective contrast.

Novel Uses For Cleaning Preparations Get Chores Done Easier And Quicker

Hints for HOUSEKEEPERS

The same bottled cleaner you use on window panes is very fine for shining the face of the clock.

By Marion Clyde McCarroll

If you haven't yet begun your Spring house cleaning, it's a good idea to organize the job before starting in.

First, investigate the storage closet to see what cleaning materials are on hand. Basic requirements for a good job include bottles of furniture and floor wax, furniture polish, a good insecticide, wallpaper cleaner, a trustworthy preparation for bleaching and stain removal, window cleaning fluid, and, of course, broom, vacuum cleaner or carpet sweeper, brushes, soft cloths and mop.

Make a list of such items as are not already on hand, and get them all in a single shopping excursion. If you haven't had a handled basket of convenient size around, get one, and put dusters, cleaning cloths, brushes, bottles and other small articles in it so that you can carry it with you when you're working and thus save steps.

A few special hints for housekeepers: Wax the inside of your garbage can; it will be easier to keep clean. Use your window cleaning fluid to shine the clock's face, clean mirrors and other household glass. Treat a small paint brush with furniture polish and use for hard-to-get-at corners and carving on furniture. Dip cheesecloth squares into a small quantity of furniture polish and allow to dry; they'll dust more effectively. And when you've finished your cleaning chores, put back the resealable caps of all bottles tightly to prevent evaporation.

Sons, George F., Walter E., Fred K., of Circleville; William A., of Londonderry and one daughter, Miss Maggie Mavis, of the home. The children visited their parents during the day. Mr. and Mrs. Mavis received many attractive and useful gifts, marking their anniversary.

Rosemarie Lombardo, young vocalist with brother Guy's orchestra, is one of the tiniest singers extant—the 18-year-old songstress stands 4' 10 1/2 and weighs a neat 100 pounds. Rosemarie, incidentally, joined the band as a regular on her 16th birthday.

Everyone who knew Hildegarde when she was a child in New Holstein, Wis., calls her "Charlie." It was her father's name, and it was the custom in the town for the children to be nicknamed among each other by their fathers' given names. Occasionally a visitor to her Wednesday night "Beat the Band" program will greet her backstage with "Hello, Charlie"—and the reminiscences are on!

BEA KAY QUIT

Beartrice Kay, the songstress-comedienne, has withdrawn from the cast of "Slap Happy," the review in which she was to be starred. Her first motion picture, "Billy Rose's Diamond Horse-shoe," is going into production sooner than expected, and Bea was afraid the time elements would conflict.

FACTORY OWNER
Maestro Paul Lavalle, of "Basin St." fame, has been leading a double life for some time now. He owns (and works an eight-hour day) in his own factory, now making radar equipment for the Army and Navy. Paul says that after victory, he will convert the factory to the manufacture of television receivers. It is not too unlikely that one day in the not-too-distant future, you may be seeing Paul Lavalle in a Paul Lavalle television receiver!

TEST THE SITUATION
BEFORE deciding which direction to take a finesse is part of the strength for his heart bid. They laid down the diamond A and then led, intending to finesse. When West discarded a heart, they realized they would have to lose a trick to the diamond Q and accept defeat.

A few of the decliners made the contract by guessing East for the diamond Q and leading the J from dummy toward the A. The better ones, however, eliminated all guesswork. After winning the fourth trick with the club K and dropping trumps, they scored the club A and ruffed the club 8. When West followed suit to all three club rounds, he marked himself definitely as having held six hearts, three spades, three clubs and consequently only one diamond. So those decliners knew exactly how to play the diamonds, winning with the K and then leading through the Q, which they knew was held by East.

Circleville Knocks Down Two German Planes Over England

DON VALENTINE HELPS MAN GUN NAMED FOR CITY

Local Youth Honored By
Men From All Parts
Of United States

FIRST FIGHT DESCRIBED

Franklin Crites Honored
For Role In Helping
Supply China

Mark off two German planes for Circleville, for Circleville is the name of a 90 millimeter gun in England with Corporal Donald Valentine in the crew. In a recent raid it smashed two of the Huns.

Serving in the gun crew are men from many parts of the United States, but when christening time came it was Corporal Valentine and his home town who were honored. The name is painted on the gun and a photograph is on the way here to the corporal's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Loring Valentine.

Describes Fight

In writing of his first fight in which the German planes were downed Corporal Valentine said:

"We got on our targets and fired and laid our claims to two enemy planes. I heard that we got one for sure, but for our side we know we got two. After one of our courses we could hear one plane screaming down. That was our probable. No doubt about the other one. When a fellow fires he does not pay much attention to anything except shoving in the shell and pulling the trigger. Maybe I am a killer. I hope so. If we are officially credited with those planes you share the honor with me because we did it for everyone back home."

"We all hope to engage the enemy again tonight."

When Corporal Valentine was in grade school he corresponded regularly with an English youth. Now, he is stationed only a short distance from the home of the Englishman and expects to visit his home town soon.

And on the other side of the world a Circleville man also is playing an important part in defeating the Axis, a part so important in fact that he is wearing a highly coveted decoration.

Wing Decorated
Franklin Crites writes:
"Today marked the end of our first year in China. We were decorated this afternoon at almost the exact hour we landed here a year ago.

"It seems that the President thought that during the month of December we did a pretty good job of getting things into China, so he decided to give the wing his citation. I was one of 12 men selected to receive the decoration for our outfit, since it would have taken a long time for the old general to have pinned them on the whole outfit. The ceremony was rather simple, but impressive. The 12 of us and four officers stood in a line at parade rest and as the general came to each of us he shook our hands. All the wing personnel received the decoration and there are lots of them, but when we get back home and spread out over all the U. S. I don't suppose a person will run into many of those little blue ribbons with a gold frame around them. The only persons at home to have one, will be Ross Hamilton, Jackson township; Fred Gerhardt, Yellowbird; Ralph Alderfer, of Saltcreek township, a pilot, and myself."

"None of us did anything outstanding, but the teamwork and accomplishment of moving the supplies apparently spoke for themselves."

TITLES FOR AUTOMOBILES
DROP LOW DURING 1943

Automobile titles issued in 1943 were 707 fewer than in 1942, according to report issued in the Clerk of Courts office, Saturday.

Rationing of new cars and fewer used cars being sold accounts for the decrease.

In March of this year 428 titles were issued against 192 for the month of February with 153 cancellations of mortgages in March and 83 in February. 127 new mortgages were noted in March and 71 in February.

DRIVER POSTS BOND

Willard C. Foster, 21, Rt. 1, Rushville who was arrested Saturday night at 9:30 o'clock for reckless operation of an automobile on West Main street, deposited $10 for his appearance. Officers Merriman and Wolfe made the arrest.

HELD FOR INQUIRY

Willie B. Anderson, 44, colored cook at a Norfolk and Western Railroad camp near Kingston was arrested by Patrolman George Greene Saturday for investigation.

NEW FACES FOR OLD: Michigan Plastic Expert Now Creates New Features, Limbs for War-Maimed

By BIRT DARLING
Central Press Correspondent

DETROIT, Mich. — Not many blocks from the pulsating war production lines of Detroit's major plants is a small, secluded studio.

The booming war plants are turning out instruments which kill and maim; the tiny studio is turning out a product which will enable maimed soldiers to face the post-war world unafraid.

For Beaver Edwards has devised a full-face mask which, literally, is giving disfigured veterans of this war a chance to trade old faces for new.

While most of Edwards' work has centered around hands, arms, noses and ears, this new development—the full face mask—is now giving him an exciting new objective.

It is the rehabilitation of servicemen who, heretofore, would remain in hospitals, hating their scars, fearing the public and undergoing a psychological hell.

"We've been keeping hundreds of these boys in hospitals where the public can't see them," Edwards points out. "Mentally and physically they are all right, but their appearance keeps them indoors.

"With this mask they will be able to go out for walks at night, at movies and eat in a dimly-lighted restaurant. They will be able, in short, to live a reasonably normal life."

This full face mask is an amazing device, and the latest of a long line of contributions to humanity on the part of Edwards, whose work is known to the medical profession as "restorative prosthetics."

The wearer of such a mask can eat, drink and smoke while wearing it, without discomfort, secure in the knowledge that it can be identified as a mask only under strong lights.

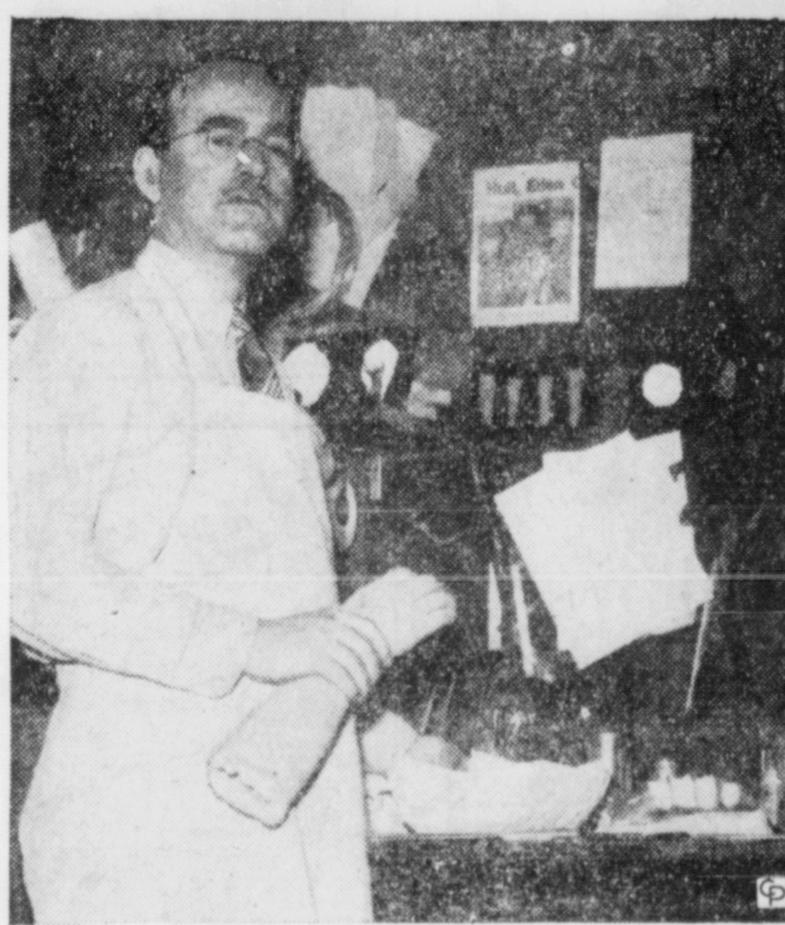

Inspired in France

Edwards, who is scholarly-appearing, but who strikes you as a business man rather than a visionary, got his idea while on a tour through France where he saw the "mutilés"—French polis of World War I, veils concealing their facial scars.

"They were all greatly depressed," recalls Edwards. "I thought: 'Why can't something be done to help make their lives happier and more useful?' I looked around, seeing them by the hundreds, arms, hands, noses and ears missing."

Edwards' chance to do something for this forgotten segment of humanity was not to come for awhile. He took up architectural work, later becoming an instructor at the Michigan College of Mortuary Science. It was while teaching here that he arrived at his plan for reconstructing shattered bodies.

His chance came when a physician referred a girl with a congenital ear defect to him. It was apparent that she needed a complete ear to give her the appearance of normalcy. Edwards went to work with plastic.

The plastic artist was doomed to disappointment. He made a dozen ears. Shaving closely, he stuck them on the sides of his face. If they didn't stay on during eight normal hours of tossing and turning at night, he gave them up.

"My wife was on the verge of nervous breakdowns quite frequently—or so she said—many times during the course of those early experiments," Edwards recalls.

"My interest is in the cosmetic appeal of making these replacement limbs look as real as possible

because of the tremendous psychological effect it has on the patient."

The Detroit man knows he has many a problem to tick yet, with the invasion of new areas and resultant wounding of thousands of American troops—many of them by jagged shrapnel.

Loss of a member need not be tragic, Edwards firmly believes. He points out that the morale of servicemen who have lost a leg or arm or hand is usually high—until they see the device that is to replace the missing member.

The black rubber replacements, which must be covered with a glove, give the wounded men psychological shocks and send their morale down to zero.

This is just what Edwards is fighting, and the plastic he now uses in his full face mask is his major weapon.

The replacement process itself is not difficult. Edwards simply makes a cast of the corresponding part of the patient's other member—say, an arm—working from there entirely from the cast, which is used to make a mold into which the plastic is poured.

Edwards allows it to harden, then, subtly, applies a solution of cosmetics, coloring the arm to the desired shade. Hair—yes, hair—is applied to match that of the patient. Upon completion the member is as soft and pliable as the living flesh of the opposite member!

There's one final step. Edwards fastens the member to the patient with a non-allergic adhesive—another development of his incidentally. There won't be any rash where the artificial limb comes in contact with the patient's flesh, and the limb may be removed at night.

Army surgeons are reportedly interested in Edwards' work, and are planning to work out a plan to rehabilitate World War II veterans through it.

Either because the British didn't want it known that they were giving a party, or out of deference to Governor Lehman's feeling, they blocked transmission of the news. However, since Lehman is a most abstemious man and the fall could not have been related to alcohol, there seems no good reason for withholding publication. Certainly it is not going to help the enemy to know that the ex-governor of New York fell down the stairs of the British embassy.

For two weeks, U. S. officials waited for him in Cairo, did not know what had happened. Lehman had been scheduled to arrive for talks regarding relief in the Balkans. Finally, the mystery was cleared up when word came that a gala reception had been given him by the British in Algiers and that Lehman had fallen down the marble steps.

of Western Electric, and also in charge of certain instructions for the U. S. Signal Corps. Under Dahl, the Rock Island plans to develop radio communication between trains, and between the brakeman and the engineer of a train, through micro-waves. This is a field of high frequency radio waves which are very short, approaching the frequency of light and heat waves.

Through micro-waves, the Rock Island expects to overcome the problem of insufficient channels available for broadcasting. The railroad also hopes to develop the use of radar in preventing train wrecks.

MRS. EMMA V. HAMMAN
DIES AT WILLIAMSPORT

Mrs. Emma V. Hamman, 78, wife of George Hamman died Sunday morning at her home in Williamsport after several weeks illness of heart disease. She was born in Pike county and was the daughter of Conrad and Christina Zahn Valley.

Her husband and three children survive. They are Mrs. Christina Gearhart, Clarksville, Royal V. Hamman, Perry township and George Hamman, Jr., Ross county. She was a member of Brown's Chapel Methodist church, of the Ladies Aid society and of the Heber chapter Order of Eastern Star.

Previous to her illness, Mrs. Hamman taught Sunday school in the Williamsport Methodist church.

Funeral services will be held at the residence in Williamsport Tuesday at 3 o'clock. EWT, Rev. R. S. Meyer officiating with burial in Brown Chapel cemetery. C. E. Hill in charge.

There will be a games party at the Elks club on Wednesday evening, starting at 8:30. The public is invited.
